CHANGE IN METHOD OF REPORTING SPLIT-INTEREST TRUSTS

During 2003, American Institute for Economic Research changed its method of reporting assets held under split-interest agreements. Using FASB 116 and 117 methods, an actuarial study of beneficiary lives was completed in 2003. The primary purpose of the actuarial study was to calculate the present value of the income stream to beneficiaries of multiple gifts with multiple lives. With the new information from this study, AIER was able to prepare its financial statements in conformity with the generally accepted accounting principles for such gifts as outlined in the FASB 116 and 117.

The net effect was to increase reported assets (assets held in trust under split-interest agreements) by $124,530,668 (Line 54), increase liabilities (present value of income stream due to beneficiaries under split-interest agreements) by $95,662,763 (Line 65), and temporarily restricted assets (actuarial present value of future charitable remainders) by $28,867,905 (Line 68).
