Form 990 (2016)

Form 990, Part III, Line 4a:

Turnaround for Children is connecting the dots between science, adversity and school performance. Turnaround develops tools and strategies for educators and administrators that cultivate a safe environment, reduce stress, increase engagement in learning and accelerate healthy development and academic achievement. Impact: During the 2016-17 school year, Turnaround partnered with 10 high-poverty public schools and 4 community mental health providers to serve 4,200 students, and trained more than 3,000 teachers, principals and social workers at the public school, Charter Management Organization and district levels. [SEE SCHEDULE O FOR CONTINUATION] In 4 of its New York City schools, Turnaround engaged in a research partnership, introducing both teacher and student facing lessons on mindfulness practices and growth mindset. This work on skills and mindsets grew out of Turnaround's Building Blocks for Learning, a framework for comprehensive student development. Usage and efficacy of these practices have been tracked via the headspace app as well as Panorama surveys and are being studied independently by researchers at Baruch College of the City University of New York. Turnaround's evaluation framework includes an extensive set of metrics mapped to our work. These measures include treatment outcomes, classroom observations, behavioral data and student surveys. As Turnaround continues to design, test and measure our tools and strategies, we are seeing indicators of success. Overall - 100% of school leaders report that they would recommend a partnership with Turnaround for Children - Third-party observations showed increased levels of teacher awareness, respect for students, positive communication and support for student autonomy and leadership - Turnaround partner schools scored in the high range for Absence of Negative Climate dimension, based on third-party classroom observations (6.2 in Upper Elementary and 6.6 in K-3, out of 7-point scale) - 84% of students receiving mental health interventions were reported to be "making some progress or "making progress." Washington, D.C. - 80% of students at Turnaround partner schools reported positive teacher-student relationships - 85% of students receiving interventions made progress towards their goals - Turnaround partner schools showed increased teacher awareness, respect for students, positive communication and support for student autonomy and leadership - Turnaround trained more than 250 District of Columbia Public Schools (DCPS) social workers and psychologists on important concepts, such as how to incorporate a trauma lens in the classroom and how to use reminding and reinforcing language in instruction. 94% of participants reported that they would recommend the services to a colleague, with 37 schools requesting additional support from Turnaround through the end-of-year survey - Turnaround trained 2,300 DCPS teachers on how to use a trauma-informed lens - Turnaround trained 22 DCPS principals on how to use a trauma lens in 3 sessions after which 98% said they would recommend attending our training and 85% reported changing their practices as a result of the training. 3 of the superintendents wanted to form formal partnerships as a result of the training - KIPP DC. In August 2016, Turnaround led a four-day training on foundational science concepts with every KIPP DC staff member - from early childhood to KIPP through College. The training was extremely well-received, with 92% of participants reporting that they would recommend the training to a colleague at a similar school. New York City - 4 out of 5 partner schools increased their scores for emotional support during the 2016-17 year - Elementary school teachers reported significant increases in their relationships with school leaders - including trust, respect and care shown for staff by leaders - Students at Young Voices Academy of the Bronx scored 48% in English Language Arts and 41% in math, exceeding both District 11 and citywide averages for proficiency - Teachers in all New York City partner schools demonstrated increased ability to focus on students' progress over time instead of their performance against peers - Elementary school teachers reported significant increases in their relationships with school leaders-including the trust, respect and care shown for staff by leaders - Young Voices Academy's emotional support score increased from 5.2 to 5.6 on a scale of 7 based on third-party classroom observations (fall 2016 to spring 2017) - Young Voices Academy's classroom organization score increased from 5.8 to 6.1 on a scale of 7 based on third-party classroom observations (fall 2016 to spring 2017) New York City and Newark, New Jersey- Teachers at 4 out of 6 partner schools reported increased relational trust among staff from fall 2016 to spring 2017 - All four schools in Turnaround's growth mindset initiative participated in 281 hours of guided meditation, typically 10 minutes at a time, during school year 2016-17 - Turnaround schools increased in emotional support (grades K-3) from 4.8 to 5.2, on a scale of 7 based on third-party classroom observations (fall 2016 to spring 2017) - Third party classroom observations in all NY/NJ partner schools showed an increase in teacher awareness, respect for students, positive communication and support for student autonomy and leadership - Third party observations at all Turnaround NY/NJ partners showed increased teacher ability to effectively prevent and redirect misbehavior and efficiently manage learning time - Turnaround partner schools scored in the high range for absence of negative climate dimension, based on third-party classroom observations. 990 Schedule O, Supplemental Information

Return Reference	Explanation
Form 990, part I, line 1, description of organization mission	Turnaround for Children's vision is that one day all children in the United States will attend schools that prepare them for the lives they choose. Turnaround's mission is to translate neuroscientific research into tools and strategies for schools with high concentrations of students impacted by adversity, in order to accelerate healthy development and academic achievement. Turnaround is dedicated to the design, development and implementation of scientifically-grounded strategies and practices that transform the teaching and learning environments in chronically low-performing, high-poverty public schools so that all children can succeed. Since 2002, Turnaround has evolved from focusing solely on children's mental health issues into an organization working to understand and address the impact of poverty-related stress and adversity on students and schools. Turnaround achieves this by doing three things - Proof and Practice: Partnering directly with high-poverty public schools to produce environments that accelerate healthy student development and academic achievement - Tools and Design: Developing research-driven strategies, practices and tools and measuring the effectiveness of these resources in driving student development in the context of adversity - Systemic Impact: Disseminating insights and resources that deepen understanding about the connections between poverty, stress and school performance in order to mobilize schools and districts across the country to tackle the impact of adversity on learning.

Return Reference	Explanation
Form 990, part III, Line 1, description of organization mission	Turnaround for Children is a nonprofit organization that acts as a catalyst for change by raising awareness about and addressing the challenges that affect any school facing adversity, particularly those in high-poverty communities. Turnaround develops tools and strategies for teachers, administrators and students, grounded in science, that cultivate a safe environment, reduce stress, increase engagement in learning and accelerate student development and academic achievement. Scientific research shows that human brains are malleable and continue to develop into adulthood. Relationships and environments shape the brain for good and for bad. Adversity, including trauma, loss of a loved one, exposure to violence, homelessness, abuse and neglect, poses risks to children's brain development, learning and behavior. A safe school environment filled with trusting relationships can buffer the stress and adversity children may experience. Turnaround is connecting the dots between science, adversity and school performance. Turnaround is using scientific knowledge and its experience working in high-poverty classrooms to design tools and strategies for educators that help put children on a healthier developmental pathway so that they can be successful in school and in life.
