Return Reference	Explanation
Schedule J, Part I	The Organization's executive expense reimbursement policy permits two senior members of its executive staff to utilize "first class" seating for air travel when the cost of doing so is economically reasonable in order to accommodate the special physical needs of the individuals and to permit such individuals to productively utilize air travel time to perform work for the Organization's ministry activities. When possible, the Organization utilizes frequent flyer miles/points to obtain an upgrade to first class seating. The Organization would prefer "business class" flight accommodations for such purposes, however, domestic air carriers do not generally offer business class. The Organization's Board of Directors considers the selective utilization of such accommodations to be good stewardship of the Organization's resources, as loss of productive work time would be costly for the Organization. The Organization occasionally provides travel for spouses where such travel serves a bona fide business purpose of the Organization.
Schedule J, Part II	See Schedule O for a detailed description of the process used to set the compensation for the Organization's officers and directors.
