Audience Research and Development NWS has linked several alternate performance formats to ongoing audience research Confronted with an economic downturn, an aging audience, and more than a generation of potential audiences with limited exposure to classical music, orchestras nationwide have tested alternative ways to attract new audiences This effort is essential for orchestras' artistic and fiscal health NWS' alternate performance formats include the following - PULSE Concerts late-night concerts (9 30 PM to 1 00 AM) each of which feature visually enhanced performances in the concert hall and an "unplugged" performance interspersed with a set of DJ-spun electronica Cocktail bars inside the hall, club-style lighting, and video projections mark these cutting-edge musical, social, and dance events - Encounters Concerts no-intermission educational performances lasting approximately one hour that feature extended, visually enhanced, introductory explanations of the music by a guest host and the conductor - WALLCAST Concerts the live projection of select NWS concerts onto the 7,000 sq ft front faade of New World Center These free, high-definition broadcasts are viewed by audiences in Miami Beach SoundScape, an adjacent City-owned park equipped with a state-of-the-art surround stereo system Each of these free monthly outdoor presentations generates an audience upwards of 1,500 people with some attracting as many as 3,500 The cycle of data gathering, content refinement, marketing redesign, and performance is ongoing As part of this process, audiences are surveyed for their reactions to the alternate formats, this dialogue gives them a voice in the creative process and helps deepen their relationship to the Fellows, the music, and NWS During the opening session of their 2013 conference, League of American Orchestras President and CEO Jesse Rosen noted, "The New World Symphony is one of our beacons for taking innovation to the next level They have not only been testing new concert formats, but they have been adjusting as they go-getting audience input, evaluating the results, and collaborating with [partner orchestras in] San Diego, Charlotte, Memphis, Detroit, and Kansas City to extend the tests outward " NWS considers its work a major step forward in bringing new ideas and research-based findings to the orchestra world Results to date show promise Alternate format concerts have allowed symphony orchestras and classical music presenters to take informed risks in their audience growth initiatives NWS Artistic Director Michael Tilson Thomas, NWS Fellows, and the institution's collaborating artists continue to reimagine the concert experience using video, lighting, and theatrical enhancements These explorations intrigue audiences and deepen their understanding of the music, they also provide Fellows with new perspectives that will inform their careers as they build on these models NWS is a leader in using digital technology to enhance classical music performance and education, both in the concert hall and online In September 2014, NWS publically launched MUSAIC, an online classical music video library of master classes, orchestral excerpts, how-to lessons, interviews, and performances This free repository serves classical music students, professionals, and aficionados Fellows benefit from its use as well while also creating content for the site As of September 2015, MUSAIC had over 62,000 users and more than 3,000 registrants to the site NWS maintains partnerships with nine major music schools around the world, all of which regularly contribute content to the site NWS' most recent digital venture is a video-based exploration of the work of John Cage, one of the 20th century's most influential and provocative composers and visual artists Debuted in April 2015, "Making the Right Choices A John Cage Celebration" grew from NWS' landmark three-day festival, presented in 2013, commemorating the centenary of Cage's birth This free online resource is built around videos of works performed during the festival, behind-the-scenes rehearsal footage, and artist interviews
