Quinn rejects partial budget

$9 billion deficit •

Governor says tax hike is needed to keep Illinois running for a full year.

Honeymoon is over •

Madigan says Quinn is trying to create a crisis to get his plan passed.

BY KEVIN McDERMOTT

SPRINGFIELD, ILL. • Illinois Gov. Pat Quinn on Wednesday carried out his threat to veto a partial state budget sent to him by the Legislature because it doesn't contain a tax increase that he says is crucial to overcoming a massive deficit and keeping the state running for a full year.

The move leaves Illinois without an official spending plan as it starts its new fiscal year, and it's unclear what that will mean for government services in the coming weeks.

It's a gambit by Quinn on behalf of subsidized day care, elder care, drug counseling and an array of other human services, which would have gotten only part of their expected funding under the partial budget. Those services would get full funding for the year if Quinn's tax hike is approved when the Legislature returns to Springfield in two weeks. If it isn't, entire agencies could find themselves shut down completely, absent the partial budget that Quinn vetoed.

Quinn acknowledged other potential fallout from his showdown with his fellow Democrats who control the Legislature, including the fact that vendors who provide services to the state won't be paid unless and until a new budget is put in place.

"Any bill incurred (by the state) as of today, we cannot pay that bill," Quinn said Wednesday.

Quinn's administration says the state faces a roughly $9 billion budget deficit, mostly because of the downturn in the national economy. Quinn has called for a two-year increase in the state's income tax, from the current 3 percent flat rate to 4.5 percent, to close that gap.

Most officials in Springfield acknowledge the severity of the state's budget problems. But Quinn, who took office in January after the ouster of impeached Gov. Rod Blagojevich, hasn't been able to convince lawmakers that his tax-hike plan is the answer.

ST. LOUIS • For months, occupants of downtown office towers watched construction workers shape a two-block stretch of dirt and grass and heretofore dead-end dreams into an architectural and horticultural melange.

On Wednesday, people swarmed from the towers and elsewhere for a closer look at the opening of Citygarden, an urban sculpture park on the Gateway Mall.

"I think it's wonderful," said Karin Hagaman, 40, of St. Louis, as she gleefully experimented with an interactive, ground-level piece of artwork that incorporates chimes. "It's so good to see all these people here. This was such dead space all that time, and now it's spectacular."

Created by the St. Louis-based Gateway Foundation, Citygarden is a 2.9-acre expanse bordered by Eighth and 10th streets and Market and Chestnut streets. Gateway purchased all of Citygarden's art, and is paying for construction costs, estimated at $24 million to $30 million.

St. Louis owns the land, improved the site and is responsible for providing water and electricity.

Chris Wright, the superintendent of Hazelwood schools, will become Missouri's next state education commissioner, sources say. She will be the first woman and the first St. Louis-area educator to hold the job.

The state board of education is expected to announce Wright this morning, according to several sources familiar with the decision.

The pick breaks a long lock on the job by outstate educators and highlights the increasing importance of urban issues to the state board.

Wright replaces D. Kent King, from Rolla, who died in January after serving more than eight years.

Wright has said she considered King a mentor.

The other candidates were Dennis Cheek, an education consultant from Kennett Square, Pa., and Bert Schulte, who has served as interim commissioner since King's death.

Wright could not be reached for comment, nor could state board members. Hazelwood School Board members would say only that they planned to be in Jefferson City for the announcement.

CITYGARDEN • FROM A1

Downtown sculpture park opens to rave reviews space. But Wednesday, visitors delighted in the makeover: a multi-faceted park divided almost seamlessly into themes representing river bluffs, flood plains and a cultivated urban garden.

Visitors snapped photos of the detailed landscaping and its 24 sculptures by international artists. They ate lunch and noshed on ice cream. Some walked from sculpture to sculpture with maps explaining the artwork. Maps, snapped up from boxes throughout the park, were in big demand during lunchtime.

A large screen drew a throng of onlookers to stare at an odd video of a woman stacking chairs. Some scoffed, but kept watching to see what might happen next.

All ages were drawn to the water exhibits.

Some tested the water in swimsuits. Some kicked off their shoes. Joan Chadwick, kept her leather loafers on as she and two friends hopped from boulder to boulder across a pond.

"We survived," said Chadwick, 58, of St. Louis, with her shoes still dry. "It's awesome. We're thinking about going through the pop-jet fountains next ... I had an idea that this was going to be kind of cool, and it is."

Children clambered up immense white rabbit sculptures at the kid-friendly park, testing their balance on stretches of walls and benches and finding themselves soaked in a dash across a plaza embedded with water spouts that erupted from below with little warning.

Josias Rodriguez, 22, of Monterrey, Mexico, posed for a friend's picture by positioning his arms to make it look as if he was squeezing a giant human head that had been sculpted by Polish artist Igor Mitoraj.

"I think it's my favorite," Rodriguez declared. "It's really good."

Christina Bertenshaw, of Chicago, fancied the piece from a different perspective. The 5-year-old climbed inside the head with her sister, Joanna, and looked out through its pod-shaped eye sockets. Christina had one complaint: "The windows are too small."

Her father, Tom Bertenshaw, mostly gushed about the park, comparing some of its components to the much-praised Millennium Park back home. He lauded Citygarden for, among other things, its flow, child-friendliness, use of water, inclusive name, and labels on landscaping throughout the park.

"It would be nicer if it were bigger, but you can never go wrong with a park," said Bertenshaw, 51. "It's something you guys should be proud of. Anything that revives a city without gambling is a good thing."

Don Bresnan, of Union, said he also was impressed, although he, too, had a criticism. "Now they need to fix that at the other end," he said, pointing toward the much-denigrated Richard Serra sculpture at the western end of the Gateway Mall. "Twain" Serra's steel sculpture that was dedicated 27 years ago, seemed a lonely wallflower Wednesday in comparison to its celebrated neighbors just yards away.

"I appreciate art, believe me, but I believe that would look better in front of Southern Scrap," Bresnan said.

Citygarden is free and open 6 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily. The city and the foundation share roles in maintaining a pristine atmosphere.

Gateway will provide security patrols, spokesman Paul Wagman said, but will treat it like a normal city park. He declined to give details.

St. Louis police spokeswoman Erica Van Ross said no officers are specifically assigned to the park, and no special regulations or enforcement efforts apply.

She wrote in an e-mail, "We will handle it just as we do with any other downtown area that has crowds that gather."

Adam Jadhav of the Post-Dispatch contributed to this report.

Sculpture to Invigorate a Shrinking City

By MALCOLM GAY

ONE telling measure of this city's past glories and present challenges is this: The United States Census of 1950 reported roughly 850,000 people living in St. Louis, today the number is around 350,000. Or there's this: In 1988, when Jonathan Franzen published "The Twenty-Seventh City," a novel about real and fictional tribulations afflicting St. Louis, his title referred to the city's plunge in rank to 27th largest in America from 4th in less than a century. If he wrote the book now, just two decades later, he would have to call it "The Fifty-Second City."

Signs of the depleted population are everywhere, from the boarded-up houses that dot the city's north side to the stubbornly vacant office buildings downtown.

Over the last 10 years, however, civic groups, private developers and city leaders have been trying to nurse downtown St. Louis back to life. Taking cues from revitalization drives in other midsize cities, they have created thousands of residential loft units. There is now a bookstore in the area, and next month a local grocery chain plans to open its first downtown branch.

But perhaps the most original — and conspicuous — step in the campaign is Citygarden, a 2.9-acre sculpture park that opened Wednesday on two blocks of the city's central corridor, known as the Gateway Mall.

Financed by the Gateway Foundation, a nonprofit organization that installs public art in the St. Louis area, the park cost between $25 million and $30 million — which does not include the collection of 24 works by artists including Fernand Léger, Tony Smith, Jim Dine and Bernar Venet. (The foundation, which has a longstanding policy of not commenting to the news media, declined to disclose the collection's value.)

Within walking distance of the Gateway Arch, the park is intended to bring tourists and art fans to the mall and to draw office workers and loft dwellers outside with an array of amenities. "It's really a hybrid landscape," said Warren Byrd, a principal of Nelson Byrd Woltz, the landscape architecture firm in Charlottesville, Va., that designed Citygarden. "It's some combination of a city park and a sculpture garden."

The sculpture collection, which includes both modern and contemporary works, is cosmopolitan in flavor, ranging from Mr. Dine's whimsical treatment of Pinocchio in "Big White Gloves, Big Four Wheels" to the mysterious, egglike form of the Japanese sculptor Kan Yasuda's "Door of Return." Visitors can call up an Acoustiguide-style audio tour, read by prominent St. Louisians, by dialing a dedicated number on their cell phones.

The park's other features include a cafe, a massive "spray plaza" and a split-level pool whose two parts are joined by a waterfall. A granite-capped "meander wall" snakes through the park's southern portion, offering seating and spatial definition, while a complementary wall of Missouri limestone arcs diagonally through the northern section. The walls, Mr. Byrd said, were "our way of marking several territories in the site" — which was previously two empty squares of grass — and of linking the two blocks.

The park, shown below in a rendering by Nelson Byrd Woltz, has no formal entrances or barriers to segregate its manicured paths and quiet spaces from the streets around it.

"It has no limits," said Mr. Byrd, whose firm also designed the Flight 93 National Memorial in Shanksville, Pa. "We wanted to make this site accessible to everybody."

He added that the landscape included several "design gestures" — rows of Ginkgo trees, native plants, wide sidewalks — that could be extended to other portions of the Gateway Mall.

City planners say they share that vision, but for now they are looking to these two blocks to spur economic development on their own.

"There are several development opportunities right in the vicinity, and as the economy recovers, I think Citygarden will make those sites a lot more attractive," said Barbara Geisman, the city's executive director of development. "This is probably one of the best things that's happened downtown in the last couple of decades."

1. LIMESTONE WALL Constructed from stone quarried about 80 miles down the Mississippi River from St. Louis, the arcing limestone wall is one of the park's dominant features. Its diagonal curve provided "the opportunity to make a higher ground and a lower ground," Mr. Byrd said. The wall's eastern portion is bisected by the park's 180-foot split-level pool (shown here with Bernar Venet's "2 Arcs x 4, 230 5 Degree Arc x 5" from 1999 on the grass beyond it). Its western section incorporates a large LED video wall, which during the first season will feature video art and films selected by local museum directors and curators.

2. 'FEMMES AU PERROQUET' One of several works by Fernand Léger depicting women with parrots, this bronze bas relief from 1952 is installed on the exterior wall of the park's cafe, within view of its patio.

5. SPRAY PLAZA With 102 computer-controlled spray nozzles, the park's "spray plaza" occupies more than 4,300 square feet, making it one of the largest of its kind in the United States. Each nozzle is outfitted with LEDs, allowing programmers to create nearly infinite combinations of water and light.

6. MEANDER WALL Evoking the twists and oxbows of the nearby Mississippi and Missouri Rivers, the 1,100-foot wall gives a loose structure to the park's southern sector, defining both open and more intimate spaces within it. Topped with Lake Superior granite — designers tried to use materials "sourced from within the rivers' basins" whenever possible, Mr. Byrd said — the wall also acts as a bench for viewing sculptures, several of which it wraps around. Here it is shown with one of the two figures that form Tom Claassen's 2004 work "Untitled (Two Rabbits)."

7. 'ZENIT' At the garden's highest spot, this towering and mysterious 1999 work by the Italian sculptor Mimmo Paladino is cast in bronze and aluminum.

8. UNTITLED Martin Puryear's 2008 stainless steel abstract explores the relationship between traditional craft — in particular, basketry — and industrial design. Doubling as a bench, it allows visitors to sit while viewing Mark di Suvero's "Aesop's Fables," shown here in the background.

9. 'AESOP'S FABLES' A classic example of Mr. di Suvero's work with industrial materials, this sculpture form 1990 is a low-slung balancing act. The collection of I-beams welded into a tidy pattern of interlocking V's at one end is counterbalanced by the curvilinear tangle of steel at the other.

10. 'LA RIVIERE' Aristide Maillol's nude, perhaps the park's most famous sculpture, is also the earliest in the collection, made between 1938 and 1943. Meant to personify a river's churning current, the bronze figure is sited here on the upper portion of the park's split-level pool, where the sound of water falling into the lower pool gives an auditory assist to the sculpture's dynamic lines.

DEER CREEK FOUNDATION
2009 FORM 990-PF
PART XV, LINES 2A THROUGH 2D

OBJECTIVES

The Deer Creek Foundation is a private philanthropy interested primarily in two program areas.

Program I: The advancement and preservation of the governance of society by rule of the majority, with protection of basic rights as provided by the United States Constitution and Bill of Rights, and in education in its relation to this concept.

Program II: Charitable projects that have the potential to enrich the cultural and artistic quality of life in the St. Louis Metropolitan area, and which are of a durable, physical nature.

GUIDELINES

*Guidelines for Program I**

The Foundation gives priority to the encouragement and support of those projects and programs which show promise of having significant regional and national impact. The one exception is that preference is sometimes given to local projects in St. Louis, Missouri, where the Foundation was established. As a general rule, action programs are favored.

Grants are most often made to organizations and institutions. Their ultimate purpose, however, is to assist individuals and groups of individuals in working toward the solution of problems in the Program I area.

*Guidelines for Program Area II**

Grantmaking in this program area is limited to unique projects of exceptional merit of a durable, physical nature, which have the potential to enrich the cultural and artistic quality of life in the St. Louis Metropolitan area, and may entail what heretofore would have been viewed as unusually large grants. Preference may be given to those projects which provide for and place sculpture in the St. Louis Metropolitan Area, and projects which create and/or maintain environments which can be enjoyed by the public in the St. Louis Metropolitan Area.

*The guidelines established by the Foundation's board of trustees normally preclude support for endowment and capital campaigns.

LETTER OF INQUIRY REQUIREMENTS

While the Foundation does not accept unsolicited proposals, it will accept letters of inquiry that meet the requirements set forth below.

For Program I: Applicants should submit a letter of inquiry, not to exceed three pages (not including the required attachments set forth below), which provides: (1) a very brief description of the problem the project seeks to address; (2) the objectives of the project; (3) the specific activities planned to achieve those objectives; (4) the qualifications of the organization and its principals to implement the project, including specifics about past accomplishments; and (5) a list of other organizations addressing the same issues. Attachments: (1) project and organizational income and expense budget; (2) existing and projected project support list (with dollar amounts); (3) list of recent organizational contributors (with dollar amounts); (4) Board of Directors list; (5) the organization's tax-status determination letter; and (6) copy of the organization's latest audit or 990.

For Program II: Applicants should submit a letter of inquiry, not to exceed three pages, which summarizes the proposed project and includes: the organization's history; project and organizational income and expense budget; existing and projected project support list (with dollar amounts); list of recent organizational contributors (with dollar amounts); Board of Directors list; the organization's tax-status determination letter; and copy of the organization's latest audit or 990.

DEADLINES

Letters of Inquiry may be submitted any time during the year.

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

In light of the Foundation's limited resources, many worthy ideas and proposals cannot be funded.

Preference will ordinarily be given to applicants which qualify for exemption under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code. Public instrumentalities performing similar functions are eligible.
