AID Volunteers and Officers evaluate the project proposals and have detailed discussions with grantee project partners on proposed work and associated budgets. The grants are approved and disbursed after an independant vote amongst the volunteer body and officers.

AID volunteer project coordinators periodically request and monitor project status including use of the grant funds. Volunteers conduct site visits and to assess the impact of the project by meeting all the stake holders and also take a stock of the grant funds use. Grantees have to submit periodic updates and submit audited financial statements at the end of each calendar year.

AID Consultants and network partners are also engaged in site visits, review and monitoring of projects as needed.
